FRESNO, Calif. (FOX26) — Self-Help Enterprise hosted a community celebration for 22 families who have completed construction of homes built themselves.

The Mutual Self-Help Housing program allowed the construction of the new neighborhood on East Annandale Ave in Fresno.

The MSHH is a unique program that instead of a traditional down payment participants put in “sweat equity”.

SHE construction staff help guide participants entirely through the construction process to build community and reduce construction costs.

Tri Counties Bank played a critical role in helping these 22 families make sure the homes are both affordable and have long-term financial stability.
